

INTRODUCTION

Leadership and governance has drawn a lot of attention in Africa today. This attention is timely, important and no doubt topical, reflecting the worldwide thrust toward political and economic liberalization. Throughout the whole world, there has been an urgent desire among various people and governments for unity, justice, peace and stability. The resurgence of this desire is not only explicable through their political policies alone; but also it is reflected in the social and economic policies (Obasola, 2002:9). In fact, most constituted governments in Africa have been undergoing serious and deepening politico-economic crisis. These problems have generated political, social and economic instability and the prevalence of ethnic, communal and religious crises have bedeviled Africa.
